Academic Service

For the policy-oriented Background Brief (BB) for the reference of the Singapore government, Dr YU has contributed to more than 30 papers in total. As assigned by the EAI and University, he frequently gave policy briefings on China-related topics at the Ministry of Trade and Industry Singapore and Ministry of Foreign Affairs Singapore.
Dr. Yu served as the reviewer for a number of international journals on Asian and industrial studies, including the Journal of Contemporary China, Energy Policy, China: An International Journal, East Asia: An International Quarterly, Journal of Infrastructure, Policy and Development and China Perspectives.

He is frequently interviewed by the media such as Hong Kong Phoenix Television on a range of topics related to China's "One Belt, One Road" initiatives, and development of high-speed railway in China and its implications.

Dr. Yu had performed the role of seminar coordinator for the East Asian Institute (EAI) for five years until January 2016. He had planned, scheduled, and organized more than 300 public lectures and seminars in total over the past five years. The EAI is one of the few institutes, not only in the University but in Singapore as a whole, to organize and open up weekly academic seminars to the public. He has done his best to promote the EAI seminar series as one of the most prestigious intellectual platforms in the region and a brand for the EAI.

EAI seminars draw sizeable attendance every week, including not only the EAI research staffs and NUS community, but also members of the public from interest groups, schools, research institutes, local ministries, foreign embassies, etc. The EAI seminar series have been widely appreciated and recognized as a high-level academic exchange platform.
